

DOCTORAL STUDIES

Preparing a research proposal and supporting materials

Updated 29 June 2018

Before you submit a doctoral proposal, you are strongly encouraged to:

- discuss your research proposal informally before making an application
- look at existing doctoral theses from the RCM and other institutions
- check that RCM is the best place for you by looking through RCM staff members currently offering doctoral supervision are listed here.

Your application must include

Research proposal

Your research proposal should be a maximum of 1500 words. Please structure your proposal under the following headings:

- Research Question: What are the fundamental issues that your project will address?
- Rationale: What is the significance of your proposed work? What gaps exist in current scholarship that your research might fill? Is your project substantial enough to sustain at least three years of study?
- Methodology: What approaches will you use, based on what theoretical background? Do these differ from those of others working in the same field? If so, how and why? Do you have the relevant experience for the project, and can you anticipate future developments from it? If relevant, do you have the appropriate language skills to pursue your chosen topic? If relevant, do you have access to the required research materials?
- Suitability: Why does your project fits with your proposed/chosen supervisor(s) research, and the strengths of the RCM
- Potential for Collaboration with non-academic organisations: could your research could be relevant beyond the academy?
- Interdisciplinarity: Does your project involve more than one discipline across broad categories of knowledge (humanities, social sciences, arts, engineering, medicine, etc)?

Bibliography

Include a bibliography of the most relevant publications in your field of scholarship, including primary and secondary publications, scores, discography and web resources as appropriate. It is recommended that your bibliography does not exceed three A4 pages in Arial, 10-point size, spaced at 1.5 lines.

Sample of written work

All applicants must submit an example of previously completed written work in English of approximately 2000 words. This might be an extract from your recent Masters dissertation, or an extended essay involving a critical or scholarly evaluation of an aspect of music. It should demonstrate the standard of your scholarly writing, including critical thinking and referencing skills.

DMus applications

In addition to the requirements listed above, applicants for the DMus must submit the following:

DMus applications for composition

You should submit a portfolio of three substantial works together with a recording of a performance of at least one of the submitted works.

DMus applications for performance

You should include a video recording of approximately 30 minutes' total duration, of performances relevant to your research area.

References

Applicants are required to provide two references testifying to their suitability for doctoral studies. Referees should be asked to email their references direct to the RCM Admissions Office at admissions@rcm.ac.uk to arrive no later than 23:59 on 15th October 2018.

Conditions of entry

Applicants for the research degrees programme should have appropriate prior educational experience. Normally, this means that you should hold, or be about to gain, a Master's degree. In exceptional circumstances, equivalent independent research and/or professional experience may be accepted. You do not need to provide evidence of your educational achievements as part of your application. If you are offered a place on the Doctoral programme, you may be asked to provide evidence as part of the Conditions of Offer of a Place.

English Language requirement

Applicants for the Doctoral programme are also expected to meet the RCM's English language requirements, which can be found on our website. If your first language is not English you may be asked to provide evidence of your ability to speak and write English. You do not need to provide evidence of your English language proficiency as part of your application. If you are offer a place on the Doctoral programme you may be asked to provide evidence as part of the Conditions of Offer of a Place.

Closing date for applications

You must submit a complete application by 11.59pm on 15th October 2018 (UK time) in order for your application to be considered by the RCM Research Degrees Committee. The RCM reserves the right not to consider incomplete applications.
